Two Men Employed by Bloke Constable as Conchman and Groom Were Rurned in His Stable, Which Was Destroyed with That of Mr. Bostwick,

Marmaroneck is a station where a number of wealthy New Yorkers leave the New York and New Haven Railroad to drive to their summer homes on the shore of the Sound. About two miles from the station, driving by the Orienta road, is De Lancy Point, or, as some of the residents call it, South Point, where two of the Standard Oil millionaires and other wealthy gentlemen have built luxurious homes in park-like grounds, sloping down to the waters of the Sound. One of these houses was built by Jabez A. Bostwick, a ten-millionaire. His neighbors were Mr. Flagler, also of the Standard Oil Company; Mr. Constable of Arnold & Constable; Clinton Gould, Mr. Bostwick's cousin: H. L. Hotchkiss, and Dr. Clark. While attempting to save a carriage from his stable. which was on fire on Tuesday night, Mr. Bostwick received an injury which resulted in his death. Thomas and Henry Atkinson, coachmen for Mr. Constable, were burned to death. On Tuesday evening Mr. Bostwick entertained Mesers. Gould and Hotchkiss and sat with them on the veranda of his house, overlooking the Sound, until 10% o'clock.

There were three other servants sleeping in the building, and these were aroused, one being sent to awaken the Bostwick household. Almost before the servants had rushed from the building both stables were afire, shooting high flames into the sky. which summoned many neighbors and the Mamaroneck Fire Department.

Mr. Bostwice partly dressed and ran to the stable, from which the eight carriage horses had already been removed, and from which the coachman, Vichford, greatly excited, was helping to remove the fifteen vehicles of various kinds. The millionaire proprietor gave his first attention to the coachman, who was greatly excited and lamenting loudly.
"Never mind, Vichford." said Mr. Bostwick,

"this is none of your fault, I'm sure. Here! I'll help you." He took hold of the singletrees of an English drag, and the coachman pushed from behind. As a corner was turned Mr. Bostwick was iammed against it, and letting go walked tola buckboard, which had been run out on the lawn, and sat down on it. At this time the two great barns were burning flercely, the Constable gardener's cottage had caught, and the Bostwick mansion was imminently threatened. No one noticed the millionairs for a while, but after a time a young Weish tutor named Williams, belonging to the Bostwick household, happened to

"I saw him." Williams said yesterday to a Sun reporter, "sitting on the buckboard waving his hands. I ran to him and he told me he was hurt and asked me not to leave him. I called one of the servants and we assisted Mr.

Bostwick to the house. He grew heavier and heavier on our arms, and just as we got him to the head of the stairs he fell to the floor.

"Dr. Clark had already arrived, and he directed that Mr. Bostwick be placed on a sofa in the hall. Then the Doctor gave him hypodermic injections, which seemed to strengthen him for the moment. He complained of great pains in his back. He spoke in a firm voice and asked for a handkerchief, and then suddenly collapsed."

pains in his back. He spoke in and then suddenly collapsed."
In ten minutes after he had been helped to the house Mr. Bostwick was dead, his wife, son, cousin, and household surrounding him. The exact cause of his death is not known. He has not been strong for some time, and it is supposed that the excitement and unusual exertion seted fatally upon his heart. No medical examination was made.

While this scene was canacted in the rich man's house there was consternation and grief among the servants of the Coastable household. Two men. Thomas and Henry Atkinson, known to have gone to sleep in the Constable stable, were missing, and the building was such a furnace that it could not be approached within a hundred feet.

P. H. Weatherby, Mr. Constable's son-inlaw, was called at about half past 11 o'clock by his cook, who had seen the glare of the hurning stables through her bedroom window. Mr. Weatherby ran to the stables, or as near as he could, and saw that nothing was to be saved there.

"It was a rearing mass of flames," he said to a Sun reporter yesterday, "and as the wind was hlowing baiskly from the southwest, my only thought was to save the Bostwick house, toward which the wind was carrying fire and cinders.

"I did not hear a moan or cry from our stable, aithough there were two men and eight horses in there. I supposed, of course, our men had escaped from the stable, and I helped the Mamaroneck firemen in their efforts to prevent the spread of the flames."

About sixty feet east of the Constable stables is the gardener's cottage. This acted as a break to the flames in the direction of the new, and as yet unoccupied. Constable residence. To the northeast are a number of high, dense trees, which kept the flames from the Bostwick residence. But despite all efforts the gardener's cottage took fire, and the danger to the Bostwick house was so great that its inmates and the body of Mr. Bostwick were removed to the Hotchkiss residence, a safe distance north. The village water works supplied a high pressure of water, and the house company was able to subdue the fire in the gardener's cottage and save other buildings on the point.

"If it had not been for the work of the fire-

They fought from the gardener's cottage, and ft is a curious fact that in April. 1801, my house was burned down, and the firemen then saved the stable by fighting the fire from the same point from which last might they saved my new house."

Thomas Atkinson was acting as head coachman for the Constables in the absence of the regular coachman, and his brother, Henry, was employed as groom. Tuesday night they were seen about the stable until 9:30 o'clock, attending to their work. Then they retired to their sleeping room over the coach house in the second story of the northeast corner of the stable.

When the first excitement of the fire had subsided, and the Atkinsons were missed, the stables had both burned to the foundation stones, and all the streams of water were at once turned on the part of the ruins where it was supposed the bodies would be. One unrecognizable body was recovered directly below the point where the men had gone to bed. Up to 6 o'clock last night no trace of the other had been found. The Atkinsons had been employed only a few months. They were hired in this city by the head coachman, and little was known of them beyond the fact that they were Irishmen, a little over 30 years old, and steady, competent stablemen.

Two hours after the first alarm nothing was left of the two great stables. From the Bostwick's everything was saved but the harnesses, saddles, and stable lixtures. From Mr. Constables not a thing was saved; a dozen vehicles, eight carriage horses and a pony, besides all the costly harnesses being lost.

Yesterday the fley. Dr. Thomas Armitage was sent for by Mrs. Bostwick's friends, and was sent fore by Sun reporter.

"He was my old friend," Dr. Armitage and." Imarried him beptised his three children, married two of them, and now this sad duty comes to me."

prepared a statement for the press, from which the following is taken:

"For some time past Mr. Bostwick's health has been precarlous, and he has refrained from all exciting life. During Tuesday evening's fire he forgot his weakness, and enthusiastically aided others in the work of saving property. His loss will be soverely felt in business and religious circles. He has been a man of great public influence for many years; noted for Christian benevolence and for great Christian devotion. Naturally quiet, gentle, and kind in his disposition, he was still firm, resolute, and enterprising. His financial ability had secured him a large competence, upon which he constantly drew for benevolent and religious purposes.

"He bestowed large gifts upon the poor and for the cause of education. His own education had been thoroughly of a business order, and his experience rendered him solicitous for the uplitting of every young man in business.

"For many years he was the treasurer of the Standard Oil Trust, an organization to which he rendered much assistance. He was also President for about six years of the New York and New England Ballroad. He was also President for about six years of the New York and New England Ballroad. He was also a director in various railroads, corporations, and banking institutions.

"From a youth he was an earnest and intelligent member of the Baptist Church. About 1804 or 1805 he transferred his membership to the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church and died in that fellowship. His influence in that church was very healthy and his munificance abundant. His contributions were large to the Lake Forrest College of North Carolina, and he also, expended a large sum in building the Emanuel Baptist Church in Suffolk street, and lately contributed 550,000 for its perpetual support. He ranked in business circles as a gentleman of sound judgment and efficient action, so that he was welcome in each official position he filled.

Mr. Hostwick was born in Delhi, N. Y., in 1830. He is said to have attended a village school with Jay Gould. When a very young man he went to Covington, Ky., and found employment in a bank, where he remained for a few years. He then bought a share in a village hardware store. He made money in that business, and branched out into cotton speculations, which called him to this city, where he permanently settled in 1893. Mr. Bostwick first became connected with the oil business two or three years after coming to New York, and formed a partnership with W. H. Tilford, under the firm name of Bostwick & Tilford, for the refining of petroleum.

partnership with W. H. Tilford, under the firm name of Bostwick & Tilford, for the refining of petroleum.

He realized the possibilities of his new business and was one of the original incorporators of the Standard Oil Company, merging his husiness with that of the Ohio reliners, the Rockefellers, Flaglers, and Andrews.

He remained actively engaged in the affairs of the great corporation until six years ago. He advised the formation of the great Standard Oil Trust, and for several years was its treasurer. When he severed his active connection with the oil company, he took the Presidency of the New York and New England Raliroad, which office he resigned at the beginning of this year.

For a number of years he has owned seats in the Cotton Exchange, the Oil Exchange, and recently bought the seat of W. V. Chapin in the Stock Exchange. His wealth is variously estimated at from $10,000,000 to $30,000 of $30.

His city residence was at 800 Fifth av. and his country place, where he died, at he Lancy Point, near Mamaroneck.

Mr. Bostwick leaves a widow and three children. One daughter is the wife of Mr. Francis Lee Morrell of the Stock Exchange; the other was recently married to Alfred Carstairs of the Royal Irish Riffes. Both daughters are in Europe. His son, 14 years old, was with him when he died.

MAMARONECK, Aug. 17.—It was reported at a late hour to-night that Constable's stables may have caught fire from an exploding lamp. About an hour and a half before the fire started there was a lamp burning in the harness room in the north wing.

DOWN CAME THE CORNICE,

It Buried Two Workmen, but They Were Taken Out Alive-A Woman Irjured. A heavy terra-cotta cornice, twenty-five feet long and three feet wide, on the roof of the now building at 387 Sixth avenue, just before noon yesterday fell with a tremendous crash. carrying with it a scaffold on which were two workmen. The crash caused great excitement on the avenue and a big crowd gathered. Citizens and a policeman ran to the assistance of the workmen buried under the mass of débris, and they were quickly released. Ambulances were hastily summoned and the men conveyed to the New York Hospital. One was Thomas Conway, 41 years old, of 221 East 101st street, and the other was William M. Rowe, 32 years old, of 177 Manhattan avenue. Both were unconscious when picked up and are, it is feared, fatally injured. Conway's right leg is broken and he is severely injured internally. Rowe has concussion of the brain and his left log is fractured. Mary Cowan, 24 years old, a servant, of 103 West Twenty-seventh street, was knocked down, as were a onth street, was knocked down, as were a number of other passers by. The building is completed save for the trimmings and furnishings. It is four stories high, has an iron front, and is firebroof. It is owned by Adams & Co. of 452 Sixth avenue. The terra cotta cornice was already in position, and the workmen were securing it with iron holts. It rested on a newly made wall a foot thick. The men were working on a scaffold supported on poles. In some way the cornice was overbalanced, and, having nothing but fresh masonry to support it, it toppled over. Policeman Logan was standing on the opposite corner watching the workmen. He saw the cornice waver, and warned people in front of the building. Miss Cowan was not quick enough to get away, and a flying brick struck her on the shoulder. Logan ran to the West-Thirtteth street station, and Capt. McLaughlin and several policemen were quickly on the scene. Detective Kemp arrested John R. Stefrer of 34d West Forty-sixth street, the foreman. At Jefferson Market he was held in $5,000 bail. Samuel I. Acken of 2 West Fourteenth street is the contractor. If he had been around he would have been arrested, too.

FLOPED WITH A HORSE THIEF. Detective Elwell of Middletown Finds Miss McGill In Jersey City.

Henry L'Hommedieu, a young' man who was being anxiously sought for by his wife and the authorities of Middletown, N. Y., was arrested at a late hour on Tuesday night in Ruempler's Hotel, at Oakland and Newark avenues, Jersey City Heights, with Nellie McGill, a rather pretty girl, the daughter of A. McGill, a farmer in Deckertown, N. J. Detective S. A. Elwell of Middletown found the couple and Detective Keenan of Jersey City arrested them. L'Hom-

Reenan of Jersey City arrested them. L'Hommedieu was very indignant at first. He insisted that Miss McGill was his wife, but when told that a charge of bigamy would be lodged against him he weakened.

Detective Elwell says the prisoner left a wife and baby and eloped with Miss McGill, to whom he had been paying marked attention for some time. For the purpose of facilitating his flight he stole a horse and buggy, and sold them when he reached Jersey City. They reached the city on Sun lay, and were married by the Rev. David Mitchell of the Scotch Presbyterian Church. Two charges, one of bigamy and the other of grand lareeny, were made against L'Hommedieu. He will 'be hold to await extradition papers. Miss McGill is detained as a witness.

Train Robbers Warmly Welcomed. GREELEY, Col., Aug. 17 .- As the Denver and Cheyenne passenger train on the Union Pacific stopped at the coal chutes at La Salle last night, two masked men entered one of the cars, and with loaded revolvers ordered the care, and with loaded revolvers ordered the passengers to hold up their hands. Hands went up in profusion, and the two men were about to collect tell from the astonished passengers when one of the latter opened fire with his revolver. The two men returned the fire, but after one of them was wounded they both jumped from the car and fied.

Work on the Orange Sewer Given Up. ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 17.—The Empire Construction Company of New York, which secured last year the contract for building the sewer system here, discharged all their workmen to-day and abandoned the job, which they had contracted to complete for $230,740. They claim that they have lost thousands of dollars, largely because they found on the line of the sewer a section of quicks and which compelled them to digfrom 18 to 28 feet below the street level at several points. They received $12,000 from the city resterday.

ROSS WAS LOOKING FOR REVENCE,

And He Told the Pollee About the Wir Tappers to Got It. Joseph Wood, alias Levy, of 223 West Forty sixth street; William Murray, altas Mulhol land, of 149 East 138th street; Charles Martin alias Frederick E. Bray of 107 East Tenth street, and James Thompson, alias Grace, of the Putnam House, who were arrested or Tuesday by Capt. Mc-Laughlin for trying to swindle William Ross of 260 West Twentyeighth street, and friend, who is said to be the son of a mil-lionaire, out of $2,500 wire and secure the togs races before the pool rooms, were arraigned at Jefferson Market yesterday morn ing, and held for examination in $1,000 ball each. The case will come up for a further hearing on Friday next. The four men met Ross, learned that he had a friend, the son of a millionaire, who was willing to bet $2,500 on a sure thing, and told him a friend, the son of a millionaire, who was willing to bet $2,500 on a sure thing, and told him that they would tap the wires, get the winners before the pool rooms had any idea that the horses were off, and thus land a fortune, providing Boss's friend would supply the capital. Instead of tapping the wires the swindlers got their information from the pool rooms, and then tried to get the $2,500 from Ross with which to play the horses. Once they laid their hands upon the money they would skip. When the operator who was supposed to be tapping the wire told Ross the name of the winning horse Ross ran out to get the smoney from his friend. On the way he drepped into a pool room and learned that the place had had the rest of the men followed.

When the men were arraigned yesterday morning their counsel, Lawyor Stuter, remarked that it was a case of the biter being bitten. Ross, he said, had intended to defraud the pool rooms, and was angry when he found that his accomplices had arranged to swindle him. He was as guilty as the prisoners, said Lawyer Stuter. Ross stepped up and told Justice Ryan that it was not so. He said that some time before one of the prisoners had made him lose $250 on false tips, and he was waiting for a chance to get even when he met Thompson, who told him of the wire-tapping scheme. The millionaire's son, who was to provide the $2,500 to bet with, Ross said, was Andrew Ludlow, whose father, he declared, is in the oil business at Warren, Pa.

POLICEMAN SULLIVAN ACCUSED.

Perth Amboy Excursionists Say He De-manded and Received $15 from Them, Policeman Florence J. Sullivan of the Police boat Patrol, and a cousin of Dry Dollar. has been charged with accepting a bribe of $15 by George Hancy and Henry McCullough of Protection Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1 of Perth Amboy. There was an excursion under the auspices of the company to Rockwell Park. on the Hudson, last Thursday. Henry and McCullough say that Sullivan boarded the excursion barge, the Chester A. Arthur, in the bay, and told them that he would close up the har unless they gave him $15. They say they refused to do so, and he left the barge.

Later in the day he appeared at Rockwell Park, having come up by train, and again demanded the money. They gave it to him. They say they induced him to write his name on a card and leave it with them. They called on Superintendent Byrnes the next day and preferred charges against Sullivan. The Superintendent went down to the Patrol and had a talk with Bullivan on Friday afternoon. Sullivan said yesterday: "The report that Superintendent Byrnes told me I was a disgrace to the department and that he would not give a yellow dog for me is false. The Superintendent asked me about the case, but he was courteous. I did not go to Rockville Park after the excursionists, and, after leaving my card, tell them to send me $5. We always board excursion boats in the bay, and the Perth Amboy boat was no exception. I went aboard of her at the order of Sergeant Woods and inspected her to see if law was being violated.
"I did not go to Rockwell Park. It is out of this State, and I dare not leave the State without the consent of the full Board of Police Commissioners. The excursion committee got my card on Friday afternoon, the day after the excursion. They came down to the police boat, and, in a very friendly way, told me that they were going to have another excursion soon, and wanted us to steam up past them to quell any disturbance that might arise. They asked me for my card and I wrote my name and address on a blank card and gave it to them. Two hours later they came back with on a card and leave it with them. They called asked me for my card and I wrote my name and address on a biank card and gave it to them. Two hours later they came back with Superintendent Byrnes and their faise story." Sergeant Woods corroborates Bullivan's statement. He says that he sent Sullivan on board the boat. He does not believe Sullivan on board the boat the dearn to be so to Rockwell Park, Sergeant Woods says, as he was on duty on the boat the whole day.

Superintendent Byrnes said yesterday that he had not concluded his investigation, "but," he added, "the story published of the charges against Sullivan is, in the main, true." The Superintendent intimated that there were others intorested besides Sullivan. When asked if he meant policemen, he said he did. He said he might be able to tell the result of his investigations to-day. That charges will be lodged against Sullivan is certain. There also may be charges against a Bergeant on the boat and one or two other policemen.

MRS. GOTTLIEB JOINS HER HUSBAND. She Furnished Straw Ball for the Lewiss and He Got Paid for It.

Mrs. Annie Gottlieb, the wife of a lawyer who is now in the Tombs waiting trial for forgery, was arrested yesterday on a bench warrant on the charge of perjury. When Ralph Lewin, a tailor at 164 Avenue B. was on trial in General Sessions two months ago on the charge of arson, he was defended by Lawyer Henry Gottlieb. The jury disagreed, and Judge Martine raised Lewin's ball from $3,000 to $5,000 to await a new trial. Mrs.

$3,000 to $5,000 to await a new trial. Mrs. Gottlieb, the wife of Lowin's lawyer, furnished surety. She swore that she owned the house at 127 Pitt street.

Bail Clerk Henry has been spending his vacation in the Catskills, and several days ago he read that Lawyer Gottlieb had been arrested and committed to the Tombs because he had been unable to furnish bail. Mr. Unger remembered that Mrs. Gottlieb had furnished hail for Lewin, and thought it strange that her husband had been unable to get bail. He was suspicious, and he came to New York to investigate. He found that Joseph C. Appleby owned the house at 127 Pitt street, and he had Mrs. Gottlieb indicted for perjury. Lewin was rearrested.

Mrs. Gottlieb indicted for porjury. Lewin was rearrested.
Lewin's sons went to the District Attorney's office yesterday afternoon and charged Lawyer Gottlieb with swindling them. They said that they gave him $175 as a retainer when their father was arrested, and later gave him $125 to secure ball. They said that they also gave Gottlieb notes for $1,500 as a security for his fee, and that Gottlieb had been discounting these notes. Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb are now in jail.

NEW FEATURES IN "WANG," AND A

STRANGE MIMIC ELSEWHERE. Activity in the Season of East Side Amusements-Fay Temple on Makes Another Disturbance, But a Little One this Time, It seems that DeWolf Hopper has a pretty loyal following in this town. He has been ca-vorting in "Wang" on the Broadway's stage this week, and though he does not present a comforting or cooling spectacle on nights when the temperature is unreasonable, it is still undeniable that he beguiles many of his guests. There is yet a little too much of Hopper in "Wang," however a trifle in excess of a fair proportion of his gambols, which are gen-erally uncouth rather than droll, and at times almost painful in their exertion. Nevertheless, guffaws and shrill screams of delight form an almost constant accompaniment to the doings and the sayings of this comedian as he ambles about the stage in the midst of light and color and youth and music. He does not supply any new comicality of value to this revival of "Wang." but there are, fortunately, a few unfamiliar features, which lend interest o the opera. A new Marie, to replace Jennette St. Henry of last season's cast, is Marie Millard, a graceful and comely girl with an excellent voice, which has been carefully trained, as one would naturally expect in the daughter of so graceful a composer as Harrison Millard. Miss Millard is a welcome addition to the ranks of "Wang's" vocalists. The cast otherwise is unchanged. Della Fox continues to participate in the fat" of the opera, and indeed she herself has taken on weight far too rapidly of late, and is in danger of losing her daintiness. The one really artistic comedian in the company is Sam Reed, whose humor is plausible and intelligent, which is a rare thing in contemporaneous light onera. Viewed as a spectacle, "Wang" answers all the requirements. It is likely, therefore, to have a second prosperous career on the Broadway's boards. lent voice, which has been carefully trained,

At Koster & Biel's hall there is a new actor this week. He is called "Amann" on the bills, and it is advertised that he is the greatest European mimie; but, to get nearer to the truth, he is what would be better tormed a "facialist," and he is clever, though not at all great. Amann is a German, with a rather genial face, and the general air of a scholar. With the aid of wigs, whiskers, and several articles of clothing, he quickly and very skilfully makes his features up so that they variously present remarkable likenesses to those of diarthoid, Bismarck, Gambetta. Napoleon I. Gladstone. Washington, and other historical personages. Of course there is appropriate music to evoke the spectator's enthusiasm as each counterfelt is shown, and altogether the act is quite interesting. It will be better when Amann has studied the faces of our political leaders, and can copy them as accurately as he does all others. Then there will be a regular campaign boom nightly at Koster's. Amann is well worth importing, but he is not by any means the first or the best in his peculiar line. The Bowery can easily recall with delight Layman, the man of 100 faces, and there have been a score of other facial immies in the past decade, not to go back as far as Sol Smith Russell, who was tolerably clever at that sort of thing in the old days.

The long-standing theatrical assertion that

Smith Russell, who was tolerably elever at that sort of thing in the old days.

The long-standing theatrical assertion that Fay Templeton is a mighty uncertain actress to deal with has received additional weight very recently. Miss Templeton has suddenly evinced a desire to filt away to Europe, and, as she generally obeys her impulses, she will doubtless be a conspicuous figure in the gay capital before many days. The trifling matter of an engagement to play in this country does not seem to have bothered this airy and shapely young actress; but the fact that such an engagement exists has visibly disturbed a strong manager and a whole army of assistants. Miss Templeton some weeks ago hired herself out to go on the road with the "Trip to Chinatown's" special company. She was to play the cart of The Widen, impersonated in town by Anna Boyd; and the general impression is that she was to get about $250 for each week's work, which is folerably good payment for a soubrette. But Miss Templeton has changed all that. The other day she flew away to Chicago and acted as bridesmaid for her own mother, the volatile Alice Vane, who, having decorously mourned for John Templeton, has wedded "All" Wheelan, that comedian having a day or two earlier procured a divorce from his first wife. Upon her return from Chicago Fay intends to sail for Paris. In this emergency Manager MeRee, who has only a few days in which to procure a substitute for the erratic soubrette, has been put to his wit's end. There are himts that Sadie Martinot has been thought of for the role, but unless she has gained remarkably in sprightliness and dash she would utterly fail to duplicate Anna Boyd's hit.

The last of the east-side play houses to turn back its doors for the new term will be H. It. Jacobs's Third Avenue. At that home of vociferous audiences and straightforward and generally wholesome entertainments a start for the fall and winter will be made next Naturday night, when the Decker brothers' ministrels will make their first appearance in town. Some of the performers in this comparatively new burnt-cork party are well known, and they have been long enough at work to warrant a brisk show. The Third Avenue's policy of "popular attractions at popular prices" will not be altered. Jacobs's public is very loyal, and his influence as manager of many theatres enables him to bring upon his circuit some remarkably good companies and stars. The two Bowery variety houses where drinking and smoking are perhouses where drinking and smoking are perhouse. manager of many theatres enables him to bring upon his circuit some remarkably good companies and stars. The two Bowery variety houses where drinking and smoking are permitted will reopen next Saturday night. At these places also there is to be no change of plan, unless it be in an increase of the regularly organized vaudoville troupes which will be the weekly visitors. The strolling variety actor, who makes his own engagements, or "plays dates," as he terms it, has been pushed closer to the wall than ever of late. The Bowery houses prefer the regularly made-up troupes, because they have their own gaudy printing, their own equally gaudy costumes, and generally quite a lot of showy scenery along with them. Besides, they are always headed by specially clever or popular performers, male or female, and that makes an additional appeal to the Bowery variety lover. There will, however, always be a refuge for the lone variety man. With the stendy increase of up town vaudevilles, or cafés chanlants his hope need not desert him. The Casino, by and by, will constantly need clever "speciality artists," and Mr. Kraus, who will soon have the new hall in West Twenty-ninth street ready for business, will be able to hire many a good performer.

West Twenty-ninth street ready for business, will be able to hire many a good performer.

August's final fortnight and the first week in September will witness a start of the new season at a number of city theatres. Next Monday night the Star will resume operations. Katie Emmett will then produce—not for the first time on any stage, as her agent tolls, but rather for the first time in town—an Irish play, "Killarney," written for her by Con T. Murphy, author of "The Iryy Leaf," "The Fatries Well," and other Irish dramas. "The Face in the Moonlight, the play in which Robert Mantell will open the season at Proctor's, on Aug. 23, is a romantic drama of the period of the First Empire, and the changes which immediately follow the exile of Napoleon and the restoration of the French monarchy. Charles Osborne of London is the author. Mantell will sustain the roles of Rabat, a fuglitive from justice, and Victor Androse, an officer in the Bourbon army. These two characters are entirely dissimilar and should afford Mantell opportunities for the display of vorsatility as well as of intensa dramatic feeling. He has returned from Europe, and his new company are already at rehearsals. The New Park, in Broadway, will open on Aug. 29 with a variety show, which is under the management of James Hyde of the firm of Hyde & Behman, who also control the Park. The future of this theatre is problematic, to say the least. Hyde & Behman have a lease of the ground, and that lease, it is understood, will expire next year. It is not likely that the site will be used for a theatre after that. The Standard and the Bijou will swing back their doors on Sept. 5, the former with "Jane," in which Johnstone Bennett will reappear, and the week side, will open on Sept. 5 with "The Power of the Creams will ge

Some of the continued entertainments on city stages have features to attract new attention to them. To-night, for instance. "A Trip to Chinatown" will reach its 250th performance, and start atresh for its 300th representation, which will be a notable event in its class. "The Vice Admiral's" cast has been somewhat changed this week. Lizzie Derious Daly, Agnes Sherwood, and Nat Cantor are new singers in the opera, and all are acceptable succerssors in their respective roles. Miss Daly also does a quick change, and later in the evening appears on the Casino's roof garden. "Sinbad," the Garden's showy burlesque, has passed its liftleth night this week, and is good for lifty more performances. Divey and his company have imparted new and delightful vigor to the music and the fun of "The Mascot" at Palmers.

A San Francisco Firm Embarrassed.

San Francisco, Aug. 17 .- Local creditors have secured an attachment against Arnold. Pollack & Co., eigar dealers, for $45,000. The firm has been in deep water for months. The California creditors with their preferred claim, will not lose anything, but the outlook is gloomy for creditors in New York, key West, and Havana. Only one Eastern creditor is protected, and he is a Key West merchant. The total Eastern liabilities are about $100,000. The managers here attribute their failure to the McKinley bill and dull trada. A STRANGE RECOVERY.

A Connecticut Child Long Bodridden Sud-denly Regains Use of Her Limbs, DANBURY, Aug. 17.—Two years ago next month Mertenia A. Underhill, a little Redding girl of 10 years, became very ill, and Dr. Ernest Smith of Redding Centre, who was called to attend her, said that she had a very serious spinal trouble, from which she might never recover. The little one became worse and other physicians were called. They agreed with Dr. Smith that her case was serious, and later they pronounced her incurable. They found it useless to give her medicines, except to relieve her pain. The child suffered most exeruciatingly. Her limbs were contorted and drawn out of shape, and she lost control of the muscles of her body until she became perfectly helpless. She remained for weeks with her feet and lower limbs raised by pillows several inches higher than her head, and the slightest touch would cause her to scream

One day in November, 1800, she asked her mother to read from the Bible. The child had previously received no religious instruction. and she was totally ignorant of the meaning of the Bible. But while her mother read to her, she said that she knew she had been converted. From that day she became a changed child, and her pain and sufferings were borne without a murmur. A few weeks ago she was worse than usual, and the physicians called to her bedside said that her death was only worse than usual and the physicians called to her bedside said that her death was only the question of a few days at the most. Last Friday evening she called to her mother and said: "Mamma. I'll soon be well now."

Her little sister came into the room and she opened her Testament and read aloud to her. She opened the book at Matthew, ix., 4-4. The words are these:

"And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

"For whether it is easier to say. Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise and walk?

"But that ye may know that the Son of Man hath nower on earth to forgive sins (then saith he to the sick of the palsy), Arise, take up thy bed and go unto thine house."

"I know that God would do the same to me, "she said to a Sun reperter to-day, "and after I was alone I commenced to pray. I felt so strange as if something was coming over me. It came up my limbs and I could feel it creeping over me. Before I knew it I raised myself up. I was so happy that I could not speak."

When her mother went to her bedside in the morning she surprised her by saying:

"Mamma, I'm well."

To show her mother she was telling the truth she raised herself up without any apparent effort. Her limbs were still drawn out of their natural position. When her mother came back a few minutes later both her limbs were in their natural position. And she asked to get up. She had not left her bed in two years, but with her mother's aid she stood on the floor. Her limbs were still weak, and she dropped down onto her knees, and then, unaided, drew herself into her chair. She has continued to improve, and her friends and herself feel confident that she soon will be restored to complete health.

RELYING ON BRIDGET SULLIVAN.

RELYING ON BRIDGET SULLIVAN. Alleged Evidence that Connects Lizzle Borden with the Hatchet in the Case.

FALL RIVER, Aug. 17 .- The alleged story of vidence on which the police arrested Lizzie Borden on the charge of murdering her father and stepmother, it is now said, came from Bridget Sullivan. The arrest followed immediately after her examination at the inquest An official who was present at the inquest said to-day to an intimate friend:

"It was what Bridget saw, not what she heard, that led to Lizzie Borden's arrest. Bridget said that she heard Lizzie down cellar hunting for something directly after Mr. Borden went out to go down town, and some time after that she saw what she is positive was the hatchet lying half hidden in the sitting room. She heard Lizzie down cellar before she went outdoors to wash windows. She also she went outdoors to wash windows. She also saw the hatchet when she came inside to get some water to complete her work."

The police can show, they say, that Lizzie Borden was either the principal in the murder or an accessory before the fact.

Medical Examiner Dolan is satisfied, and so are the police, that there was absolutely no spurting of blood from the wounds. While, perhaps, one or two drops may be found on the dress Lizzle wore, the police do not consider them necessary to establish their case.

This morning the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Borden were buried. Medical Examiner Dolan said that there was, no further need of defersaid that there was no further need of defer-ring the burial. Only the cemetery workmen

CAUGHT THE DETECTIVE'S EYE. He Haw a Peculiar Chest and Found In It a

WALHALLA, S. C., Aug. 17 .- Secret Service Agent Forsyth noticed a suspicious-looking chest at Anderson, S. C., several days ago. The chest weighed 1980 pounds, and was addressed to G. T. Baughman, Walhalla, S. C., consigned by J. H. S. of McCormick. The secret service agent opened the box, and, after removing carpenter and blacksmith tools, found in the bottom of the chest a walnut cabinet. In this were found six sets of moulds, over one hundred coins, finished and unfinished, and a stick of "half and half," a metal used by counterfeiters. There were two moulds for standard dollars, one for Mexican dellars, two for quarters, and one for five-cent nickels. Baughman is highly connected. His wife is the only daughler of a highly respected citizen, and his brother-in-law is a Government official.

Detective Forsyth took with him Deputy United States Marshal W. E. Balley, and came here. Not receiving his trunk, Baughman became susticious and ran away. Forsyth secured information of his whereabouts. Baughman was arrested. He declared that while the chest was his he knew nothing about the walnut box. He finally workened and made a full confession. were found six sets of moulds, over one hun-

Michigan's Girl Dynamiter.

Hupson, Mich., Aug. 17 .- Jennie Tabor, the young woman dynamiter, who tried to blow up her brother and sister to obtain their oney, and who is an admitted burglar, made a final confession yesterday to the Sheriff. When the girl was accused of burglary she declared that her lover. Charles M. Meyers, had forced her at the point of a revolver to go to a neighbor's house and rob it. Meyers was arrested. She admitted that in implicating Meyers she lied. He will be released at once. She also admitted that some of the money stolen was used to buy the dynamite intended to blow up her brother and sister, and that Meyers knew nothing of the scheme.

Jewels to the Massum of Art, and the Bulk of the Estate to Her Stater.

The will of Middy Morgan, the woman cattle reporter, who died last June, has been filed at Port Richmond, S. L. She leaves to the Metropolitan Museum of Art her cameo bracelet, by Saulino: Mosaic bracelet, by the Cavaliere Barberini: flexible gold bracelet, as a specimen of English art; three topaz brooches, as specimens of Wicklow wrought gold; diamond mounted double-case hunting watch, presented to her by King Victor Emanuel, together with the jet mourning chain attached to it; with the jet mourning chain attached to it; Irish hunting watch, chain, and whistle, and Florentine mosaic box.

The remainder of her property, with the exception of a dozen or so bequests of $100 and $50, she leaves to her sister. Jane Morgan. This includes cash, moneys on deposit, stocks, bonds, and other securities. The will gives Jane Morgan power to dispose of one-half of the money and securities by her last will and testament. On the death of Jane Morgan the will gives half of the money and securities not disposed of by her to Margarot Selena Gren Cameron. In case of the death of Jane Morgan without making disposition of the estate disposable by her, the will gives all of the setate to Join Thomas Hadder, a nephew. The executors of the will, which is dated May 25, 1892, are John Thomas Hadder, William White Niles, and Fordham Morris.

The New Postal Cards.

ANSONIA. Aug. 17.-The contract for the new postal cards has been given to Al Daggett and the cards will be made at the same factory where the present cards are printed, in the borough of Shelton. The stock will be made by Wilkinson Bros. & Co., who make all of Daggett's stock now. The new card is a folder One side is used by the writer of the original

One side is used by the writer of the original message and folded over. On the other half the receiver writes his reply and remails the card. There are to be two denominations—one cent for domestic use and two cents for international correspondence.

The FoshOffice Department accepted Daggett's bid four days ago, and the contracts and bonds were signed yesterday. The first order for the new cards was received last night. It amounts to 12,000,000, and Mr. Daggett expects to turn out 100,000,000 in a short time. The business at the factory is very brisk and the work is being pushed.

Death Mercaled Hts Double Life,

MONTREAL, Aug. 17.-The funeral of George Dillon, a young man, 31 years old, who died day. Two women, each of whom claimed to have been his wife, demanded the body. There was an angry scene and both women threatened to make trouble at the funeral, which was arranged to take place this morning from was arranged to take place this morning from the hospital. Both women attended the funeral, but they were kept apart. Both women claimed to have been regularly married to Dillon. The first woman says she met Dillon at Chambly, near Montreal, and that they went to La Motte. N. Y., in 1885, where they were married by a Methodist minister. The other woman, who gives her name as Bella Scott, says that Dillon married her three years ago in Montreal. It seems that Dillon was leading a dual life and dividing his time between the two women.

CHATHAM, N. B., Aug. 17 .- A storm that be gan last Wednesday night and ended Sunday was in its effects the most disastrous felt at Chatham for years. Four ships were stranded in Miramichi Bay and a schooner was wrecked off the bar. A mill with a lot of logs floated down the river during the storm, and is supposed to have been smashed to pieces. It is believed the loss to crops will be very heavy. So far as can be learned, no lives were lost.
